"All roads lead to Rome"
Is not the adage still;
Next week all the highways
Will lead to Hopkinsville.

Big crowds are attending the Tennessee State Fair at Nashville this week. Many Hopkinsville people have attended.

The Court of Appeals decided the Foster-Pflanz contest from Louisville in favor of Foster, who won in the lower court and was given the Democratic nomination for jailer.

The next legislature should repeal a great many laws passed by the last legislature, abolish a great many offices created in recent years, cut down expenses wherever possible, adjourn and go home.

Col. Gothals announces that no damage was done to the canal by an earthquake Tuesday. The Gatun locks are believed to be equal to any test, earthquakes included, every part of the mechanism, working perfectly. This is the fifth shock since 1904.

TWO GOOD PAPERS

Messrs. Bible and Brooks Elected To Membership In The Athenaeum.

The Athenaeum held its regular October meeting Thursday night at Hotel Latham with 15 members present and President Tandy presiding. Dr. Manning Brown had an interesting biographical sketch of Swedenborg under the title "A Prophet with Tardy Honors."

Mr. A. H. Eckles wrote most entertaining on "The Reform of the National Banking System of the United States."

With papers were discussed by various members.

The vacancies in the membership were filled by the election of Hon. Jno. F. Bible and Prof. Paul P. B. Brooks. Those present were: W. T. Tandy, H. W. Linton, T. C. Underwood, T. J. McReynolds, H. D. Smith, H. C. Smith, Ira L. Smith, A. H. Eckles, Dr. Austin Bell, W. T. Fowler, J. W. Downer, J. C. Duffy, Dr. T. W. Blakey, Chas. M. McEacham, Dr. M. Brown.

SEVERAL PRIZES

Won by Christian Countians at Tennessee Fair.

Capt. J. W. Riley, of Newstead captured first prize at the Tennessee State Fair with "Norvill the Great," in the saddle horse ring stallion, under 3 years class. The second prize was awarded to Mr. S. A. Reeves, of Pembroke, with "Lord of Pine Blows." Mr. Reeves also captured second prize on "Little Prince," combined gelding ridden and then driven. In the saddle pony contest shown under saddle, stallion, mare or gelding, Mr. John H. White won second prize.

WATER IS TURNED INTO CULEBRA CUT.

Panama, Oct. 1.—Water was let into the Culebra cut from Gatun Lake through four 24-inch pipes under the Gamboa dike at nine o'clock this morning.

At the present rate of flow the Cut between the Cucaracha slide and the Gamboa Dike, a distance of about five miles, will be filled to a depth of fifteen feet by October 10, the date set for the destruction of the Gamboa Dike.

Since the suspension of steam shovel operations, the Cucaracha slide has extended completely across the Cut to the 73-foot level, so that when the water is admitted to the probable lake level of sixty-eight feet on October 10, it cannot pass this barrier.

It is now proposed to ditch through the Cucaracha slide, and the resulting rush of water is expected to carry away a large portion of the obstacle.

MINOR CASES
ARE HEARD

Not Much Being Done In Circuit Court This Week.

DIVORCE CASES ARE HEARD

Damage Suit Growing Out of Death of Isham Palmer Tried Yesterday.

Hearing of the evidence in the case of Mrs. Edna Cravens against her husband, Herbert Cravens, for divorce, took up most of the time of the court Thursday morning. Mrs. Cravens asks for a decree of divorce and $2,000 alimony, charging cruel and inhuman treatment. The defendant made a strenuous defense.

A decree of divorce was given to Mrs. Lucy Williams against her husband, James Williams.

In the afternoon a jury was made up to try the case of Mrs. Ellen Palmer against the Empire Coal and Coke Co. Isam Palmer was the husband of the plaintiff and was killed by falling slate in the mines of the company. She prays for damages to the amount of $2,000, as her husband's death was caused by carelessness of the employees of the company. The company contests the suit on the ground that Palmer's business was to look after the roof and he worked where he chose without being directed by anyone. The argument was begun after motion hour yesterday morning. Gordon & Cox, of Madisonville, represent the defense, assisted by Hunter Wood, Sr. Trimble & Bell are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

After being out a short time jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $1,200. The case may be appealed.

Answers were filed in the following cases:

J. A. Ragsdale vs. L. & N. R. R.

B. L. Cannon vs. L. & N. R. R.

The case of H. P. Rives vs. L. & N. R. R. was dismissed.

The case of Fate Hite vs. J. C. Duke was stricken from the docket.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas Tandy announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Bennetta

to

Mr. Milton Gant Moore

The wedding will take place in November.

The above announcement was made at a luncheon given by Mrs. A. H. Eckles Tuesday. Those present were: Misses Mary Tandy, Addie Green, Willie Rust, Louise Jones, Alice Radford, Nell Tandy, Agnes Flack, Mesdames Alfred H. Eckles, Irving Roseborough, Robert Maxey, Ben Moore, Guy Sturling, Thomas Underwood, Howell Tandy, Walker Wood, C. H. H. Branch, Wm. Tandy and E. M. Flack.

The color scheme was green and white and it was carried out in all the details. The decorations were especially attractive and tasty. At each place at the table was a tiny wedding slipper filled with rice and also containing miniature cards with the names of Miss Tandy and Mr. Moore.

Miss Tandy's costume was amethyst chiffon, trimmed with amethyst chiffon and lace.

Woman Fleeced.

Miss Elizabeth Shelton, aged 60, who owned a $1200 farm in Webster county, was wooed by a stranger calling himself John C. Wilson, who persuaded Miss Shelton to sell her farm and go to Memphis with him to be married. With $575 in money and $625 in notes Wilson disappeared, leaving the lady still unmarried.

BRADSHAW-SUMMERS

A Former Christian Countian Comes Back For Bride.

The marriage of Dr. E. B. Bradshaw, of Cadiz, and Miss Lady J. Summers, was solemnized Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Ida Chappell, 705 Walnut street, this city. Rev. H. E. Gabby officiated, only the immediate family being present. The young couple left at 11:30 for Cadiz, where they will reside.

Dr. Bradshaw has been practicing dentistry in Cadiz for several years and is a prominent citizen of that place. He was reared in Christian county and is a member of a pioneer family of South Christian. His friends are legion.

His bride is the only daughter of Mr. W. D. Summers, who resides five miles west of the city, and is a sister of Mr. Leslie A. Summers, of Gracey, one of the most substantial young farmers of the county. She is possessed of much beauty and is greatly beloved by a large circle of friends.

ANNUAL CONVENTION

Of The State Sunday School Association.

Joslin, Louisville Trust Building, Louisville, Ky. For further information call on or address

ANOTHER TOBACCO CO.

Organized and Warehouse Will Be Built.

The past season's tobacco business, heavy, as it was, will be eclipsed next year. At least that is the present outlook. Anticipating a larger business than ever before a new company was formed the first of the week.

Douglas Hancock, a man of many years' experience in the business—in fact he was raised in it—is to be the head of the new company. Other prominent tobaccoists are members of the company.

The company will do business in the name of the Hancock Warehouse Company, and a large loose floor sales building will be erected as soon as possible on North Liberty street, between Second and Third.

Our Poet's Latest.

Our local poet, J. W. Ridgway, has caught enough time from his business to give us the following poetical effusion:

Backward, turn backward, O time
In your flight;

Give us a girl whose skirts are not tight;

Give us a girl whose charms, many or few,

Are not exposed by too much peek-a-too.

Give us a girl, no matter what age,
Who will not use the streets as a vaudeville stage;

Give us a girl not too sharply in view—

Dress her in skirts that the sun can't shine through.

SOCIALISTS
SENTENCED

To Jail For Contempt of Court
At Seattle, Washington.

WOMEN ARE AMONG THEM

Two Lawyers Are Heavily Fined
And Forever Disfranchised.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 3.—Yesterday 55 socialists who signed a notice to Superior Judge Humphreys that they would disregard his order in regard to street speaking, were cited into court to answer a charge of contempt and many of them were heavily fined.

The judge fined Kate Sadler, a street orator, $100 and costs and imposed the same fine upon Mrs. Hannah Anderson, who retorted that she had no respect for the court.

Hullet M. Wells, late socialist candidate for mayor, and Glenn M. Hoover, former assistant attorney general of Washington, were fined $100 each and "forever disbarred." H. O. Taylor and Ray O. Draper, who did not sign the recommendations of defiance, but who applauded Mrs. Anderson in the courtroom when she gave her opinion of Judge Humphreys, were each sentenced to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $300.

Defendants who explained that they signed the resolutions of defiance through a misunderstanding were released upon payment of trivial costs.

The defendants who were fined announced in court that they would not pay the fines. Judge Humphreys said the prisoners would be placed in the county stockade where criminals engaged in clearing land for the county are kept.

Appeals to the state supreme court, it is said, will be taken.

17 POLICEMEN

Will Keep Order During The Fair.

The Fair Directors are not anticipating trouble at the fair next week, but they have taken commendable precautions to guard against anything unpleasant occurring to the thousands who will be in attendance and will have seventeen special policemen constantly on duty. N. H. Fentress will be chief officer and it is useless to say that he will do his duty well. The policemen will be sworn in by the County Judge and will have all the authority of peace officers.

At Christian Church.

The campaign for attendance at the Ninth street Church of Christ is about to enter upon its fourth week. Its progress during its first three weeks has been steady and strong. The leaders of the church are confident that this progress will continue with increasing power through the six weeks of the campaign which are still ahead.

Tomorrow will be the first Sunday in October. The day is of special interest as marking the beginning of a new period of effort which is to be had with the month. On the first Sunday in November a report is to be made of all those who have been present at all of the sixteen regular public services of this period. This is not to take the place of a similar day of recognition planned for the final end of the campaign which will occur on November 16th.

Last Sunday was full of interest despite the inclement weather of the evening.

The minister will lecture to his Bible Class and preach as usual at tomorrow's services. The Bible School will enjoy a special service at 9:30 which will be conducted by the girls of the school.

WISCONSIN LAW

Retards Marriages, Preachers
Ask For Raise of Salary.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 1.—Stringent laws passed at the last session of the Legislature have reduced marriages at La Crosse and other Wisconsin border cities to a minimum and ministers are seeking larger salaries because of the serious cut in their revenues.

The pastor of one of the largest Lutheran churches in town, who ordinarily has many weddings, said today that he had not performed a marriage ceremony in three months, and other ministers make the same complaint.

Last month twenty-three La Crosse couples crossed the river to Winona to be married, and others are going to other Minnesota points.

The new laws forbid all marriages within five days of the taking out of the license except for two very serious causes, and after January 1 will also require that all men married in Wisconsin submit to a physical examination.

This law has materially decreased matrimonial progress all over the State, especially in border towns like La Crosse, where access to another State with less stringent laws is so easy.

Kenosha and Milwaukee are particularly hard hit, being so near the Illinois line.

MANY CHURCHES

Represented at Universalist Convention at Crofton.

Nearly all of the Universalist churches in the state are represented at the Convention in session at Crofton.

The occasional sermon was preached by Rev. J. B. Foster yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, and after praise service the convention was organized, with President Gray presiding. Judge John H. Myers delivered the welcoming address.

In the afternoon Mr. C. A. Brasher delivered an address, his subject being, "What Manner of Life Should a Universalist Live."

The election of officers will occur today. On tomorrow there will be two sermons and a memorial service.

Rev. J. M. Rasnake, of Cannon, Ga., formerly pastor of the church here, is attending the convention. The exercises will close tomorrow night.

CHEMICAL ENGINE

Extinguished Incipient Blaze
On East Ninth Street.

The fire department was called to the home of Earl Bradley, East Ninth street, about 12 o'clock Thursday. An incipient blaze had started around the flue but was put out by using the chemical engine. The damage was insignificant.

That Car.

He owned a handsome touring car.
To ride in it was heaven;
He ran across a piece of glass—
Bill $14.97.

He took his friends out to ride,
'Twas good to be alive;
The carburettor sprang a leak—
Bill $40.95.

He started on a little tour,
The finest sort of fun;
He stopped too quick and stripped a gear—
Bill $90.51.

He took his wife to town to shop,
To save car fare was great;
He jammed into a hitching post—
Bill $278.

He spent his little pile of cash,
And then in anguish cried;
'I'll put a mortgage on the place,
And take just one more ride!"

Always an Active Enemy.
Above all things, be on your guard against your temper. It is an enemy that will accompany you everywhere to the last hour of your life. If you listen to it, it will frustrate all your designs. It will make you lose the most important opportunities, and will inspire you with the inclinations and aversions of a child, to the prejudice of your gravest interests. Temper causes the greatest affairs to be decided by the most paltry reasons; it obscures talent, paralyzes every energy, and renders its victims unequal, weak, vile and insupportable.—Fen-

MUSIC OF THE "PASSEL-TREE"

Remarkable Feat Credited to King
David by Harshell Preacher of a Past Generation.

E. E. Kelly writes in the Toronto Republic: Old Daddy Jones was a harshell preacher back yonder when I was a little boy. He was one of the old time kind who believed in choosing as his text the first passage of Scripture that met his eye when he opened the Book. He also believed the Lord would put in his mouth the necessary words of exposition. And one Sunday he opened the Book and his eye was greeted with the third verse of the one hundred and fiftieth Psalms: "Praise him with the sound of the trumpet; praise him with the psalter and harp." Daddy Jones amplified and expounded at length on the trumpet, went into its history, use and capabilities as an instrument of worship. Then he came to the psalter, which he pronounced "passel-tree." And old daddy went on in a delightful intonation—provincially known as "sing-songing"—"My brethren and my sistern ah! I do not know just what kind of a musical tree the passel-tree was ah, but no doubt King David knew ah. No doubt he had planted this passel-tree right beneath his window, and in time it grew and grew until a branch of it grew right in at King David's window ah. And there is no doubt in my mind ah that as King David saw it he took up his bow ah, and he drew his bow across that passel-tree limb ah and dis-coursed the most sweetest music imaginable ah! And, brethren and sist-ern, we should do likewise and praise him not only with trumpet but also with the passel-tree ah!"

NATIONS OF WIDE DIVERGENCE

Albanians and Turks Have Not, and Seemingly Never Can Have,
Anything in Common.

"Perhaps one of the reasons that the Albanians have never really submitted to the Turks lies in a fundamental incompatibility between the Albanian and Turkish character," says a returned traveler from the Balkan. "The Turks are melancholy, even tragic. The Albanians declare for happiness. The story is told of some Albanian soldiers who saw a performance of Karaguz, in which a love story was acted, but without bringing the lovers together at the finish. The Albanians wouldn't have it for a minute. They flourished their revolvers and yelled: 'Make them happy! Make them happy!' And happy they had to be made before peace could reign again. The Al-banians live in a high, mountainous country, with deep valleys in between ranges. Even in times of peace they are in constant warfare with the Turks. There will be a 'frontier incident,' and then over the border into Montenegro flee the Albanians. The Montenegrins help them in their efforts at reprisal against the common foe, the Turk. Albanians are great on blood feuds. The Italian vendetta is a mild diversion beside the Albanian blood feud. The English woman, Mary Edith Durham, traveler and war correspondent, is a friend of the Albanians. She often lives among them and is their trusted friend.

Modern Fountain of Wine.

A fountain of wine is one of those historical extravagances which are generally associated with the name of Nero; yet as recently as Sunday, July 13, the public fountain of Wangen, in the Alsace wine country, flowed with wine. In the middle ages the commune of Wangen was sentenced to make an annual payment to the monastery of Strasburg of four hundred measures of wine. In 1793 the payment was abolished by the directory. Under Louis XVIII. two merchants secured the transfer of the payment to them, by means of forged documents, for $650; but the commune commenced proceedings against them, in which it was victorious on July 13, 1830. Since that date a communal festival has been held on that day, and from the public fountain erected to commemorate the victory wine flowed for one hour in the day.

Improvement in Ireland.

According to the register general of Ireland the census of 1911 showed that in that year there were 861,873 inhabited houses in the country, as compared with 853,158 in 1901. The average number of persons a house was five in 1911 as against 5.2 in 1901 and 6.2 in 1841. Tenements of less than five rooms in 1911 comprised about seventy per cent. of the total and 75 per cent. of 1901. One-room tenements in Ireland declined in number during the last decade from 79, 149 to 58,334. Education statistics showed that there was an increase in both primary and secondary schools, especially the latter; that there was a marked decline in illiteracy, and that there was a percentage of pupils attending school. The number of persons receiving poor-law relief fell from 22.7 per 10,000 of the population in 1901 to 17.6 in 1911.—Consul Hunter Sharp, Belfast.

Wonderful Restraint.

"Yes, our engagement is broken.
She seemed to have an idea that she could treat me in any old way and make me stand for it. But I told her last night that I was through and that she could look for someone else to be imposed upon."
"Handed it to her just like that,
did you?"
"Yes, and she gave me the biggest surprise of my life."
"How?"
"She didn't say 'I should worry.'"

FOUND HAPPINESS IN LABOR

Sensible If Unusual Course Followed by Man Who Had Millions at His Command.

A forceful lesson in the human nature which rules us all may be gathered from the experience of the young man who, inheriting a large fortune, was wise enough to realize that no man, rich or poor, can find happiness except in work and accomplishment, says the Boston Herald.

This man, while still in college, felt heir to several millions, but tired of the futility of an existence in which there was no element of difficulty, left his home and college, obtained employment on the construction line of a railroad, rose on his own merits to be a section boss and now reports himself thoroughly happy.

His action was futile and foolish for one who might use the power of wealth for his pleasure and others' good, it may be said, but it shows that he realized the real unhappiness of those who try to be happy without the stress of work, be it self-imposed or necessary for self-support.

No men are more unhappy than those from whom circumstances have removed the pressure which requires hard work, and who have not had either the willingness or foresight to force themselves to tasks which call for their best and utmost endeavor.
Often, indeed, it may seem that nothing would be pleasanter than a life of luxurious idleness, but one has only to see the victims of such living to be disabused of this delusion.

In this country the privileges and responsibilities of great inherited wealth have been but recently experienced, and the very newness of such possessions has led many to waste their lives in the futile quest of pleasure. Luckily today more and more of the sons of rich men have grown to understand that they can lead a satisfactory existence only if they live much as others do, using their wealth rather to enlarge the results of their work than to escape its call.

OBJECT LESSON MISSED FIRE

Uncle's Idea of Teaching His Country Nephew Caution Proved Something of a Failure.

A youth from the country was paying his first visit to New York, and, accompanied by his uncle, a leading banker, went to the theater, says the Pathfinder. While waiting in the lobby before the performance the country boy flung back his coat and with hands in his pockets displayed a heavy gold watch-chain. The uncle observed the act and resolved to teach him a lesson.

While the young man's attention was diverted the uncle slipped the watch and chain from his vest, and they entered the theater.

"What time is it?" he asked when they were seated.

The boy felt for his time-piece and found it was gone. Allowing him to make a thorough search of it, the uncle told him he had taken it and read him a sharp lecture. "You are not in the country now, you know, where you can display valuables with impunity. You should be more careful. Let this be a lesson to you."

So saying he slipped his hand into his overcoat pocket where he had put the watch. To his utter dismay he found it was gone. And when he looked to see if his own was safe he found that also had taken wings.

Modern Surgery.

Dr. A. L. Sorel of New York, who is in London for the medical congress, gave details of a new marvel in surgery he is studying; nothing less than the grafting of new limbs to replace those lost. The victim of an amputation may have the leg of a dead man or woman fixed upon him by surgeons, who will join the nerves and veins, making the dead limb revive and begin a new life with its new owner.

Doctor Sorel has been long experimenting on animals. "I took the leg from a dead white dog," he said, "and grafted it on a yellow dog, whose leg had been removed. The yellow dog, with one white leg, now trots about thoroughly well. I have now three patients awaiting my return, to whom I hope to give new limbs taken from the bodies of persons accidentally killed."

Little Lard Used in Austria.

On account of its high price very little lard is consumed in cooking in Austria, but a preparation commonly called "apelsefet," or cooking fat, is used. It is sold under the name of "Ceres," and it is said that its principal ingredient is palm oil. This substance is prepared in the towns of Bodenbach and Aussig, in the Reichenberg district, and sells for $13.40 per 100 pounds in large quantities or 14 cents per pound in small quantities in Carlsbad. It is put up in cakes weighing one-half kilo (1.1 pounds) and is sold without container.

Old Indian Fire-Producer.

Nanaimo, the Coal City of Vancouver island, has just secured some interesting Indian relics, presented to the Native Sons' post of that city by W. Chappel of Gabriola island. Among the specimens is an admirable example of a stone axhead and what, for want of a better term, may be called a "binder." This is a flat, circular rock with a hole in the center. There is also an oblong, lemon-shaped stone which fits in this hole. The natives used to create a spark by revolving the small stone in the hole.

A Strange Story.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says:
"I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." Whether seriously sick, or simply ailing, take Cardui the woman's tonic. As a general tonic for women, to improve the appetite and build up the constitution, Cardui is in a class by itself. Those who have used it say it does the work; it relieves, it cures. Try it. Your druggist has it.

"The ago and dullness of the miscellaneous reading-matter with which physicians stock the tables of their waiting-rooms have long been a subject of jest. Here is a story which shows that it might be to the doctor's own interest to supply more entertaining reading.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Royal Society of Medicine on one occasion, Mr. Birrell declared that only once had he been in search of a physician.

"I determined," he said, "on that single occasion at least, to die secundum artem. I started off to consult a doctor in Harley street, who had written a book on the disease from which I believed I suffered. It was a hot day in July, and I had to walk from near Addison road to Harley street. I was in a profuse perspiration when I arrived. I had to wait, and on the doctor's table I found the book written by him on 'my disease.' I opened it at random and read: 'The patient who is suffering from this disease never perspires.' I at once walked out."—London Telegraph.

Ladies' Purse From Frog Skins.

Eighteen big mountain frogs have been brought to this country from the Philippines by Dr. F. M. McAllister, ship's surgeon on the Korea. He will give them to the New York park commission for propagation.

The mouse-colored skin, mottled with spots of darker hue, may be used for the manufacture of women's purses and chatelaine sacks, as are the hides of crocodiles.

The frogs are delicate in spite of their size, and five died on the voyage.

The dead frogs were in much demand among women passengers, who wanted to have purses made out of the skins.

MISS STARLING'S LETTER

Tells of a Great Feast Given By The Natives In Far Off Siam.

Nan, N. Siam, Feb. 22, 1913.—I intended to write you last night, but Mr. Palmer is crazy about "42", and had to have "one game", and when I got home it was half past ten o'clock. So I went right to bed. I had just gotten to sleep when I was awakened by a man going by singing at the top of his voice. The natives don't go out much at night, because they are afraid. But this one man stays out late every night, and comes by any time between ten and midnight, singing at the top of his voice (I think he sings to keep up his courage). Sometimes he goes back and forth three or four times; and I was afraid for a while that he was singing for the benefit of our girls. But I asked the teacher if she knew what he was singing about and she didn't, so I suppose he wasn't singing to them. You know, in the native-ling, they make up the words as they go along; and their songs are sometimes very indecent. Well, last night my patience had come to an end; so I got up and stepped out on the porch, and the bright moon light, and called the watchman. I said "What does that mean by coming along here every night, yelling at the top of his voice, and waking us all up? If he does it again, will you tell him it is very unpleasant". I heard the man in the road say "I was just 'choleing' (the word for this extemporaneous singing). This morning I told the watchman I said what I did to him, so the other man could hear; and he told me that he started to the gate, and the man took off down the road, as fast as his legs could carry him. So I hope we will have no more midnight serenades for a while."

I got such a nice lot of mail last week; a letter from a girl in China. She is to be married next June. She is evidently very happy, and her letter was very funny; she says she expects to be happy always, for her husband-to-be "fairly worships her". I bet she'll pull his hair if he doesn't.

For three days last week, the people have been keeping the feast of the new moon, an annual festival. The girls wanted to see the floats, so I took them up on the front porch of a new building, next to the temple where they were taking the offerings, and out of the crowd there was as big a crowd as at a circus at home. There were dozens of floats,—horses, buffaloes, elephants, trees, temples, men, all made of bamboo, covered with cloth. You can imagine how artistic these figures were,—a white elephant, with blue ears, and a con of salmon tied around his neck; a purple and green dragon, a red and blue horse, with satangs (the Laos penn) sewed all over him. Every temple around here sent an offering, and beside the carriers, a procession of women and children, carrying flags, flowers, and rice, accompanied each float. They would go a little way, and then they would stop and dance a while. You know they dance with their hands and arms, instead of their feet, and they take the most grotesque attitudes. And it was too funny to see the most dignified looking men, stopping in the middle of the street, and taking the most ridiculous poses. Of all the offerings, there were more native rockets than anything else, and at night they had fire-works. There were three days of feasting and I was very glad when it was all over, for it broke in to our school attendance sadly. I don't like to have our Christmas mix in with this sort of thing, though there is so little of our conception of religion in it, I am not sure it will do them much harm that way. But of course the conduct at these times is more or less loose,—less so than an American crowd on such an occasion. I should say I saw only one drunken man, and the soldiers were taking him to prison. The worst noise is from their gongs and drums, which they beat incessantly, "to make merit". And a very pleasant form of making merit is, for the little boys.

Nan, N. Siam, March 8, 1913.—The Taylors got in Monday last about noon; the Christians went out beyond the city gates, to meet them, and the girls went some distance, but they reached here before we expected them, so we just fell in with the procession. It is so good to have them here. I worked like a Turk, getting things cleaned up for them; Mrs. Taylor is a good house-keeper, and it is so nice to come in at noon, and find someone waiting for you. Living alone didn't depress me, but you can imagine there was mighty little home atmosphere about a place that is shut up half the time. The Taylors are fine; I never cease to regret that you didn't get to see Dr. Taylor; he is so jolly, and such a sensible, capable man. And she has a great big motherly heart, that spreads sunshine all around her. I am boarding with them for the present; we don't know yet just how we will be situated, after the Palmers leave. The Taylors may have to move over there then, to take charge of the Boys' School.

I am still getting X-mas presents through the mail. Last mail brought me a little book from L. ne's friend, Mrs. McPherson, and a book of kodak views from Mrs. Peoples. Some of them were excellent. There was a particularly good picture of Dr. and Mrs. P. and their son Ray, taken as they sat at the window. She is crimping her hair, and it makes a great improvement in her. Their son is a very handsome young man.

This afternoon, the two schools and all the Christians are coming here for games and the native sweet-cakes; but principally to welcome Dr and Mrs. Taylor back. So the girls are very busy today, getting ready.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Palmer came over, and we spent the time going through Mrs. Taylor's trunk, and seeing all her new clothes. She brought me a blouse, that is in one of the trunks, coming up on the boats. She is so kind; she sent me a pretty calendar for X-mas, and her girls at home, mailed me a handkerchief through the mail. They are most generous people.

Two of our elders leave today for Ch' Mai, to attend Presbytery; and one of Mr. Palmer's teachers goes over to attend Normal school. We were all invited to go, but we are just in the midst of a term, and can't close down now. Besides, it is too long a trip for me to take, unless it is absolutely necessary.

Mr. Irwin is still here, recuperating after his fever; he has given up his tour to the north, as hot weather is coming on, and will return to Bangkok. He is a great dreamer and book-worm, and while he was sick, he evolved a scheme for watering Siam during a dry season. We have very dense fogs during the dry season, and his idea is to shoot these, and condense the fog into rain. So all you would have to do to water the garden, would be to get up early, and shoot the fog. He is very enthusiastic over the idea, and I shown't be surprised if he tries to patent it.

Dr. Taylor is to be kept on a very strict diet for six months,—milk, eggs, chicken, bread and butter, and dried fruit. They want to be sure the ulcer has healed. He has the same trouble as Mr. Gillies. The latter is better, and they expect to start for Ch' Mai some time this month. Mr. Yates is improving slowly, and will leave as soon as he is able.

We shall have to begin this month, on making out our orders for next year. It is a task I dread, though I shall make my supply of provisions as light as possible. But there's a lot of work about it.

We had a little waif brought into school this week,—the seven year old daughter of one of the Englishmen who has gone home to stay and married, leaving a native wife and four little children out here. So they have put the oldest child in school here. She is used to eating foreign food with her father, but we think it best to accustom her to the native food as soon as possible, as she will probably live here all her life, and will not have the money to gratify higher tastes. She is a pretty, pathetic looking little girl,—as fragile as an egg-shell. She wears foreign clothes. She is seven, and is not as tall, nor as large in any way as Mary Palmer, not yet four. Her mother wanted her to study only English, but I insisted on her studying Siamese, too, as she will probably have to make her way in the world.

IN LOVE AND WAR

Old Saying That "All's Fair" Exemplified in This Story of a Substitute.

By WILLIAM FREEMAN.

I come upon him outside a second-hand bookshop disconcertedly rummaging among the contents. With a grunt of disgust my uncle turned to move away. Our eyes met.

"George," he said, "I find myself driven to the border-line of destruction by the diabolical sameness of existence. I don't want my youth again, for I shouldn't know what to do with it if I had it; I don't want to be poor, for I'd sooner struggle along with my $20,000 a year than work for my living. But if you've any suggestion to offer--"

"Merely," said I (the thought had been in my mind from the first), "that you should become an honorary member of the R. T. P. club."

"Beg pardon?" said my uncle, sharply.

"The R. T. P., or, in plainer English, the Right-to-Propose club. It is quite the newest idea, and refreshingly unconventional. It is run by ladies, but there is a large honorary membership of men.

"Any members of the R. T. P. may, without losing caste in any way, take her fate into her own hands with regard to any of the honorary members.

"Members are placed in rotation upon what is termed the 'Active List.' Each is given ten days in which to propose to the honorary member upon whom she has set her affections.

"If by the end of that time she has failed to meet the situation she is dismissed the club with ignominy. If, on the other hand, the man should fail to respond, he must give excellent reasons for not doing so, failing which, full particulars of the case are sent to every paper in the city."

"But, from the merely masculine point of view--"

"The honorary member has the delightful uncertainty of never knowing whether or when a lady member has, vulgarly speaking, set her cap at him. Nor does he even know who is upon the active list. The secret is as jealously guarded by the committee as the existence of the club itself."

It was five days afterward that I received the note from Uncle Nicholas which announced that he had been formally elected. The fact was no news to me. Miss Craske, the club's secretary, had already alluded to it. I called at once upon my uncle to tender congratulations.

We took a taxi to the club forthwith. Miss Craske met us in the hall.

My uncle is not a man whom one would accuse of shyness, but his step lacked, I thought, something of its usual confident briskness. We introduced him to several people, and allowed him to drift away.

For ten days afterward I did not see him at all. I had other things to think about--Millicent Craske among them. But one particularly grilling afternoon I returned to my rooms to find my Uncle Nicholas.

"George," he said, "I want your assistance. It's all due to that diabolical club of yours. I've been there every day since I joined. The very atmosphere of the place seems hypnotic. George, whose name is next on the active list? Is it--is it Miss Craske's?"

"Why are you so anxious to know?"

"Because she's after me."

"I'm sorry," I said, "but I'm afraid you'll have to see the thing through."

My uncle rose, favored me with one last, despairing scowl, and departed.

Two days passed, and then at the club, I found myself shaking hands with my uncle, who was sitting on the window seat. Miss Craske was near--very near.

"George," said my uncle faintly, "you will perhaps be surprised to learn that--that Miss Craske--Millicent--your future aunt--"

"I think," she said, kindly, "that Sir Nicholas is trying to tell you that he has made me a happy woman and that we are engaged to be married."

"It's true, George. According to Rule 17, Section 5, I am compelled--or, directed to lead Miss Craske to the altar. We shall be glad of your congratulations; but"--he rose and edged toward the door--"as I've a man I must see about a patent ventilator, I--"

At eleven o'clock that evening my telephone bell rang furiously.

"George!" said a weak voice.

"Yes?"

"Can you come round to see me?"

Provisionally, an empty taxi was passing the door. I was whirled to Mount street. My uncle looked thinner and more dejected than ever.

"George, you must find a way out for me--"

"You're referring to your engagement?"

He groaned an affirmative.

"There's only one possible avenue of escape. Rule 28 contains a clause to the effect that any honorary member who can obtain a substitute satisfactory to the lady, in the person of another honorary member--you follow me?"

"George, you--you will be that substitute?"

"But on an income of $1,000 a year--"

"Pooh!--the thing can be adjusted in ten minutes. Do you think you can make her happy on $5,000 a year, George?"

I took up my hat.

"That," I said, "can be easily ascertained. Wait for me half an hour."

Millicent had been staying with her aunt, who is a discerning soul, and made no excuses for leaving us tete-a-tete.

Millicent, her cheeks still glowing with excitement, looked superb. I caught her in my arms and kissed her.

"George," she said, "as the future Lady Fosdyke--and your aunt--your aunt, George--"

"Never!" I said. "I come with power to arrange an armistice and to exchange prisoners. Uncle Nicholas has had his fill of unconventionality for the rest of his blameless life."

"Explain!" she commanded.

I explained. Miss Craske sighed, sighed again.

"If--if he hadn't been so unreasonable--"

"He hadn't met you. He didn't understand."

"Then he shall understand now," she said, firmly, and crossed to the telephone.

"Are you there--Mr. Nicholas Fosdyke? Yes, I'm Millicent--Millicent Craske. George has just called to tell me of your generous offer. . . . Will I accept? Certainly not! Wait, wait--I want you to understand why. The whole thing has only been a joke--a stupid joke. There isn't any R. T. P. club. George and I just invented it because you wouldn't hear of his marrying, or even let him introduce me."

"Yes, we've behaved abominably--inexcusably. We don't want your money. We're going to try to scrape along and we hope you'll forgive us and come to the wedding. . . . I beg your pardon? Yes? . . . How dear of you to say so!"

She put back the receiver and turned to me with shining eyes.

"George, put on your hat again. You're to go round at once to receive the avuncular blessing. He isn't a bit angry--just relieved. He says the experience has been worth $5,000 a year to any man."

And, despite the fact that we are preposterously happy, he says so still.

HOUSEMAID TO HERMIT CRAB.

The common hermit crab keeps a housemaid to clean out his house. When he first starts life this particular species of crab hunts for some large shellfish's shell in which he can live at ease, rent free. He usually chooses a large whelk shell, and introduces a large seaworm, belonging to what is known as the "nercis" family, and which grows to a length of six or eight inches, to keep the interior of the shell clean. The crab feeds heartily on sea creatures that wander carelessly into the shell, and throws the indigestible parts of them about the floor. The nercis worm promptly consumes these remains and keeps the shell as clean as a new pin.

EXCUSE OF THE FUTURE.

"John, where have you been so long?"

"As I was coming home in my monoplane, I got caught in an air-hole and couldn't get out for the longest time."

GREAT SUCCESS.

"How did your wife's garden turn out?"

"Much better than she expected. Seems her onion bed produced lilies of the valley."--Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series--an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

LEGAL RIGHTS MADE PLAIN
Verdict Rendered by French Court Will Be Hailed With Joy By All Theater Goers.

A verdict has just been given in the Paris courts which ought to rank as the magna charta of the theater goer, says the Boston Evening Transcript. Henceforth in Paris, at least, it is by law established that a spectator who pays his money at the box office has the right to see the stage; and, what is more, to see it without the necessity for acrobatics or contortion. Failing that, the manager must reimburse him. The plaintiff of forever-to-be-blessed memory in this test case was given a "strapontin"—despicable little folding gangway sent—from which it was possible by leaning at a perilous angle to catch a fugitive glimpse of the conductor of the orchestra. As that was not precisely what he had "come out for to see,"
he asked for his money back, and,
receiving nothing but insults at the box office, sued the manager. He got what he sued for, and ten shillings damages as well. The court, in its verdict, concluded that it was the duty of theater directors, when they had nothing save badly placed seats at their disposal, to advise would-be spectators of the fact, and reimburse them should they find the seats unsatisfactory. Another tyranny is at an end.

ROYAL CHILD'S GRAVE REBUKE
Tsarevitch Resented Officer's Failure to Salute Him and Unfortunate Man's Naval Career Ends.

The Russian royal yacht Standart was the scene of an incident last October in which, says the New York Sun, the little Russian crown prince asserted himself with a great deal of childish dignity.
He was taking an airing on the deck of the yacht, accompanied by a lady, a friend of his mother. They passed an officer who was lolling in a chair, and puffing a cigarette.
Whether he did not see the boy has not been explained, but he continued to take his ease as the boy and the lady passed by. He did not rise, as is the custom, and salute the son of his ruler.

The tsarevitch excused himself to his companion, and returned to confront the officer. The man rose to his full height and, with his hand at salute, looked down at the indignant boy. The tsarevitch glared at him indignantly.
"Sir," he piped forth, "I do not mind so much that you did not stand and salute me, as you should have done, but that you should not have done so when I had a lady with me was a very gross neglect!"
He turned on his heel and rejoined his companion. The officer was discharged that evening.

BASEBALL FAMILY.
He—There are nine members of my family, and we are just like a baseball team.
She—What position does your father play?
He—Father is the pitcher—the other eight support him.
She—And your mother?
He—She is the catcher. Whenever anything happens, mother always catches it.
She—What a queer family—just like a ball team!
He—Yes; we live on a farm, and my little brothers play in the outfield.—Judge.

POISON IN BEE STING.
When a bee stings it gives its victim a hypodermic injection of an irritant poison. This is the bee's defense against its enemies. In the abdomen of the bee lies a gland which secretes the poison.
This passes down to a double bulb in which it is stored until needed. From the bulb a slender tube passes through the sharp sting, which lies in a sheath. When the bee stabs its sting into the skin of the man the muscles squeeze the bulb of poison and a drop of this is squirited into the wound.

OLDTIME ORATORY.
Mrs. Helen P. Longstreet, widow of the famous soldier, said at Gettysburg, apropos of an oration that had failed:
"The windy, spread-eagle oratory of the past is dead, thank goodness.
Such oratory reminds me of the boy who said:
"Oh, what is a brilliant conversationalist?"
"A brilliant conversationalist my son," replied the old man, "is the woman who gets the first start."

Worth Weight In Gold.
Abingdon, Va.—Vra Jennie Mc-Call, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist sells it, in 21 bottles.

FOR EXPERTS TO FIGURE ON Little Problem as to "What Becomes of the Money?" Seems a Bit Puzzling.

Here is a little problem in the popular course, "What Becomes of the Money?" A small bundle of linen is sent to the laundry. The bill is 30 cents. But in doing the work the laundry loses a house cap worth 50 cents. The laundry willingly adjusts matters and gives its patron 50 cents for the lost cap. The patron, in turn, gives 30 cents back to the laundry for the work done. In reckoning the result this was apparently the case. The owner of the linen—minus the missing cap—had 20 cents to show for the lost article.
But the cap was worth 50 cents.
Therefore the patron's loss would appear to be 30 cents. It apparently was no better with the laundry. The laundry received 30 cents justly due it for work. But it felt impelled to make good the loss of the cap to the customer, which meant the taking of 50 cents from the laundry's profits.
Now, if the laundry thus lost 50 cents and the customer lost 30 cents, who got that money? Perhaps some expert on the high cost of living can

MADE THE LONDONERS LAUGH
American Orator's Little Surprise a Good Deal of a "Hit" in British Capital.

An American orator sprang a pleasant little surprise at a dinner in London the other night. The trick is well known in his own country, but is something of a novelty here.
"Words do not come easily to me," he said, and the sympathy of his audience was aroused.
"I cannot do better," he continued, "than quote from an author familiar to us all." Then he proceeded:
"A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z."
The quotation was delivered with due emphasis, and anyone at the end of the room might have imagined that he was saying something really weighty.
Then he started all over again, "A B C D," etc., his voice rising and falling. Here a touch of pathos, there a flash of rhetoric. Four or five times he went through the performance, the laughter growing as his hearers entered more and more into the humor of the thing.—Tit-Bits.

RIGHT TO HISS UPHELD.
If you didn't like a "turn" in a London music hall show you have the right to "hiss it." A jury of free-born Englishmen have so decided at the Swansea assizes.
Alfred E. Pratt, employed by a London publishing firm, claimed that he was justified in showing disapproval of what his counsel described as the vulgar and silly dog-grel of one of the songs.
The jury found for the plaintiff, and awarded him $250 damages against Herbert Taylor, manager of the Cardiff Empire and Moss' Empires, Limited, jointly, as a result of his forcible ejection from the hall.
A witness stated that when the plaintiff got outside he looked as if he had come out of a boxing match
—New York Tribune.

CHILDREN'S READING.
In limiting a child's reading to what we ourselves hold to be, or what somebody else holds to be, a wholesome literature, we ought to remember that in the matter of reading—whatever may be true of anything else in the wide world—a child, no more than a grown man, gets any benefit from that which he does not enjoy. Make him learn his lessons by all means, be they palatable or unpalatable; they are another pair of shoes. But when his task time is over, and he is loose for a glorious while among his books, then go warily, and remember that you are a parent and not a pedagogue. Ay, and not more than you need be of a sensor.—Hubert Bland, in the London Sunday Chronicle.

ENGLISH FAMILIES OF THREE.
Families of three are more numerous than any others in England, according to a Blue Book recently issued. Such families constitute 19 per cent. of the total number; those of four, 18 per cent.; of five, 14 per cent., and those of six, 10 per cent.
In London the women living alone outnumber the lonely men to the extent of 58,594 to 37,130.
